HARTFORD, CONN. – Wiggin and Dana attorney Aaron Bayer is serving on the Judicial Task Force on Public Access, established by the acting Chief Justice of the Connecticut Supreme Court, David Borden, to increase public access to court proceedings, meetings and documents. Bayer is one of two private practice attorneys appointed to the Task Force. He is chairing the Committee on Access to Judicial Proceedings, which, among other things, is making recommendations concerning televising arguments in the Supreme Court and Appellate Court as well as certain civil and criminal trials. The Task Force is to submit its report to Justice Borden on September 15th. The Task Force meetings themselves are televised on the CT-N network, and additional information, including the current committee reports, can be found on the Task Force web site --
