NEW HAVEN – Wiggin and Dana is pleased to announce three new partners.

Anthony P. Gangemi, a member of the firm's Intellectual Property Practice Group, is involved in counseling clients on the development of intellectual property strategies covering all forms of intellectual property (i.e. patents, trademarks, copyrights, and trade secrets). In addition to helping clients procure intellectual property rights, he also is involved in intellectual property litigation to enforce those rights. Anthony's diverse technical background has allowed him to draft numerous patent applications covering a wide range of technical areas.

Kenneth D. Heath, a member of the Litigation Practice Group, is experienced in trial and appellate litigation, including complex civil trials with significant constitutional, statutory and common-law claims. His appellate experience includes complex tort, employment, and intellectual property cases, as well as arbitration appeals. Ken also has represented media clients on First Amendment issues and the right of access to court proceedings on matters of public importance.

Kim E. Rinehart, a member of the Litigation Practice Group, focuses her practice on complex civil litigation and appellate law for businesses, universities, hospitals and health care institutions. Kim has substantial experience defending class action lawsuits. Kim also is part of the firm's legal malpractice defense group.
