Editor's note

By Linda L. Randell

During my two and half years of editing Infrastructure, we have sought to cover all of the utility, communications and transportation industries in which our members spend their professional lives. This is the first issue in which water is featured. I had the unique opportunity to interview the present and former chairmen of the water committee of the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners about the current state of the water industry and what they expect for the future.

In addition, we have two articles highlighting the information that Section programs and committees offer. One article provides a flavor of the discourse on security and reliability that formed the basis of two continuing legal education programs. If you were not able to attend these programs, the article may persuade you to attend the next programs. The second article is a window into the committee reports, including discussion of actions of the new federal accounting oversight board.

Finally, hoping that we have piqued your interest on the information resources available to members, there is an article illustrating the three quick steps to searching Section Annual Reports and Infrastructure online.

As always, please let me know what you would like to see in future issues. Write to lrandell@wiggin.com.

"Editor's Note" by Linda L. Randell, published in Infrastructure, Volume 44, No. 1, Fall 2004 © 2004 by the American Bar Association. Reproduced by permission. All rights reserved. This information or any portion thereof may not be copied or disseminated in any form or by any means or stored in an electronic database or retrieval system without the express written consent of the American Bar Association.