

Mannheimer Swartling tax attorney Karin Gustafsson joins Wiggin and Dana for three month exchange program

WIGGIN AND DANA

Counsellors at Law

Karin Gustafsson comes to Wiggin and Dana from Mannheimer Swartling, one of Sweden's largest law firms, where she specializes in corporate tax law. Mannheimer Swartling's ongoing exchange program with a number of leading law firms serves to further train and provide experience for attorneys engaged in international transactions.

"Wiggin and Dana is delighted to have Karin with us to assist us in our growing international tax practice," said Bruce Hood, tax partner in Wiggin and Dana's Manhattan office. The firm's ties to the Swedish firm go back more than a decade, when Wiggin and Dana partners James Farrington and Patti Melick were attorneys in Mannheimer Swartling's New York office.

Graduating in 2000 from Uppsala University law school with a Swedish master of law degree, Karin has been an associate in Mannheimer Swartling's Stockholm office since August, 2000. In Sweden, she advises clients on a broad range of tax matters including domestic and international restructuring and reorganizations, inbound and outbound international transactions as well as mergers and acquisitions involving Swedish and non-Swedish companies. Her experience also includes double-tax treaty analyses and tax issues relating to EC law.

In 1998/99 Karin attended University of Miami where she took several business law classes as part of an exchange program that her Swedish university had with UM.
